Hillary Clinton: Empowering Women is a 'core imperative'

NEW YORK—Hillary Clinton delivered a rousing speech on women's rights Friday, insisting that empowering women is a "core imperative" for society if the United States is to enjoy economic success and remain a global leader.

Speaking at the Women in the World Summit organized by Tina Brown, editor-in-chief of Newsweek The Daily Beast, Clinton acknowledged women "have come so far" in areas including politics and in the workplace. But she called gender equality the "unfinished business of the 21st century"—not just in developing countries, but in the U.S., where women continue to be "marginalized" when it comes to access to education and their ability to receive a salary equal to their male peers.

The American Association of Fundraising Council Trust for Philanthropy estimates that women's charitable giving has increased by more than $15 billion since 1996. Yet, most organizations still focus their fundraising efforts more heavily on men.

Globally, women's economic power is soaring. Women make 80 percent of all buying decisions around the world. In the United States women are, in effect, (one of the) largest national economies on earth, larger than the entire (!) Japanese economy.

•Women control most of the spending in the household - about 80 percent.

Still not convinced? In The Power of the Purse: How Smart Businesses Are Adapting to the World's Most Important Consumer -- Women, (Pearson/Prentice Hall 2006), author Fara Warner asserts that:

- Women account for more than 50 percent of all stock ownership in the United States. By 2010, women will account for half the private wealth in the country, or about $14 trillion. By 2020, you can expect that number to reach $22 trillion as wealth continues to Women account for >50% of US stock ownership and when women of equal education, abilities and similar social status are compared pay disparity disappears!

- Women control or influence 67 percent of household investment decisions. Forty-three percent of Americans with $500,000 or more in investable assets are women.
- Women control 48 percent of estates worth more than $5 million.

Women are the most valuable and UTILIZED resource in the US and DEVELOPED WORLD economies

Women control more than half of the investment wealth in the U.S., according to Mary Quist-Newins author of Women and Money: Matters of Trust.

The number of wealthy women in the U.S. is growing twice as fast as the number of wealthy men.

- Women represent more than 40% of all Americans with gross investable assets above $600,000.
- 45% of American millionaires are women.
- 48% of estates worth more than $5 million are controlled by women, compared with 35% controlled by men.
- 60% of high-net-worth women have earned their own fortunes.

Some estimate that by 2030, women will control as much as two-thirds of the nation's wealth.

 - It's in the math!

Why it has to be women

Equality of opportunity is not just a matter of improving corporate diversity profiles. The simple fact is that companies that employ a number of women in senior positions tend to do better on a range of key measures than those that do not

By Judith Giordan

Women are tangible. We are flesh and blood capital and talent – and we deliver results. But the value we bring to an organisation has traditionally been viewed as intangible – not readily or directly measured or able to be captured on a balance sheet – until now.

Zigzag Invest's Intangible Capital has advanced the average annual rate of return over the past 10 years. On 10th October, Intangible Capital announced the latest award of its Women's Leadership Fund, with a board including Christie Blair, Kim Campbell and Jenny Douglas (the former Prime Minister of Canada) and New Zealand's respected Lord Brankley, the former CEO of the P&G firm in New Zealand, and several others, open to applications. The fund is a testament to the need for greater female representation, and taking an explicit stance against those who do not. In this way we hope to make a real difference towards achieving parity for the women in the workplace.

The Women's Leadership Fund joins the angel group of Golden Seeds and the funded fund of a range of private equity investment in gender diversity in corporate and represent efforts to invest in an often-undervalued intangible asset – the value of women and diversity to business for results and corporate reputation.

Simply put, the data has shown that the presence of women in corporate leadership positions adds tangible to the bottom line, and the National Association of Corporate Directors reported that companies with women on their board generate value in fact, corporations by building robust teams, enhancing board diversity, bringing fresh perspectives and improving corporate reputation. This paper reviews the evidence that there is a compelling business case – in terms of operations, reputation and finance – for promoting women into positions of corporate leadership and having women on the board. It also provides recommendations for specific actions women and companies can take to enhance and successfully engage in the workplace.

Current state of gender diversity
The fact that women make up 50% of the population has, in many cultures, not translated into equal representation of women and diversity in senior corporate roles. In fact, the global gender gap index shows that the world has not made as much progress to date in diversity and women's leadership roles as it should.

Not to be forgotten, traditionally associated with work force such as "working like the men of our countries" or "in a man's world".

Equal representation with training, development and support to help women to reach such as diversity and leadership.
